About Us

Our role is to ensure that training packages, and therefore vocational qualifications, reflect employers' and students' needs, both now and in the future. To do this, we will engage with employers and students across Australia, conduct detailed industry research and collaborate with experts in the vocational education sector before reviewing and developing training products.

What we do

Gather industry intelligence and engage with stakeholders

Develop business cases to create or update qualifications, skill sets or units of competency within vocational training packages

Carry out project work to make approved changes so that – at a national level – qualifications, skill sets and training packages for our industry sectors reflect Australia's current and future skills needs
